Why choose ASG for your PPL theory?

Since our foundation in 2015, our approach to theory training has been characterised by providing students with a bespoke, high quality, and personalised training experience.

We limit class sizes to ensure the optimum learning environment, support students throughout their PPL training journey, and deliver the highest standard of theoretical knowledge instruction. Through our high quality instruction, aside from being more likely to excel at your exams, you are likely to retain this important information as a Private Pilot.

Our facilities are a unique aviation training environment ideal for an aspiring aviation student. With over 20,000 square feet available located next to Dublin Airport, the entire building has been designed from the ground up to provide a bespoke, convenient and a best-in-class learning environment for aviation professionals. We share the facility with a number of airlines and training organisations and it houses a fleet of Full-motion and fixed-base Flight Simulation Devices, some of which our students get to sample on their breaks from classes.

MEET OUR TEAM

What is involved in the PPL theory course?

Our PPL theoretical knowledge course consists of 121hrs of theoretical knowledge training including both distance learning and classroom training elements. Our course involves an online programme which is managed and overseen by our training team through our online learning management system. Our online learning system can be accessed across all devices and all of the learning content can even be downloaded for offline use. The learning centre includes lots of useful tutorials, progress tests, and training material to help you succeed with your PPL exams.

A total of 32hrs (4 days) of classroom instruction shall be provided. Each classroom day normally comprises of approximately 8 hours of instruction and classes are conducted over weekends so that you can easily attend. Classroom sessions may be completed “in-class” or by logging in to our “hybrid” classroom. You can even book your revision class place online here once you have completed the course enrollment process.

How much does the course cost?

The course cost of our PPL course is €850 which includes:

- Access to Subject Matter Experts (SME) support throughout your course
- Access to administrative support
- Access to our online learning centre which contains learning material and progress tests to assist and support you through your PPL theory studies
- 4 days' of focused classroom revision lectures (in-class or remote attendance) conducted by real-world industry professionals in preparation for your PPL examinations (conducted over two weekends)
- A PPL theory course completion certificate to permit you to sit your PPL examinations

Note: course price does not include PPL theory manuals which must be purchased here directly from PadPilot. If you have already purchased PPL theory manuals (c.€140 for a complete set) which can be used instead.

When are the classes conducted?

The “in-class” element of our PPL theory classes are conducted over two weekends (4 days attendance in total) from 9 to 5pm. These classes are timed in line with the published Irish Aviation Authority (IAA) PPL exam sittings which take place every two months (see here).

All of our training is conducted at Kestrel House in the Dublin Airport Logistics Park right next to Dublin Airport. With our hybrid classroom, you can choose to “sit in” or “login” and even alternate between both by physically attending class on one day and logging in for the class the next day - this option provides you with the ultimate flexibility for your PPL theory course.

The hybrid classroom concept

ASG's "hybrid" classroom concept provides you with the ultimate flexibility when choosing how you would like to attend your PPL revision classes with us. The concept is simple: our "live" PPL revision classes are conducted on location in Dublin, Ireland. Some students may be "in-class" and others will be attending by logging in. In order to ensure a fantastic classroom experience for those who choose to attend remotely, we have invested in 4K webcams, a dedicated instructor login station, and a classroom facing flat-screen display where the faces of those attending remotely will even be displayed to the students who are attending physically - so everyone will feel part of our "hybrid" classroom environment!

How do I start?
